7 OF 12 YANK COMMIES ARRESTED

Council Urges Public Realize 'How Much It Gets For Nothing'

"It's about time the people of Circleville realize how much they're getting for nothing," Councilman Robert Adkins flared Tuesday night in a heated reply to a letter criticizing city council for its failure to appropriate enough money for a police two-way radio.

The letter was received from A. Vaden Couch, general manager of the Ralston-Purina Co., whose letter said his firm had been approached by Mayor Thurman I. Miller to contribute to the radio fund.

Couch's critical letter declared it was "undignified" for the mayor of a city to solicit funds for a project which should be backed by the city and that the city was obligating itself by asking for private donations.

Ray Anderson said of the missive, "I feel sure someone has poisoned Vaden's mind in this matter."

"To begin with, we haven't refused to appropriate the money—matter of fact we haven't acted on the proposal legally."

Solons Hear Requests

Varied Petitions Seeking Action

Sanitary sewers for a proposed north end housing addition was among a string of requests presented for consideration Tuesday night to Circleville city council.

Service Director Joseph Rooney said Frank Pump of Chillicothe has asked for sewage to be extended to Atwater and Wilson avenues, the area in which 18 prefabricated homes are planned for construction.

Council, however, took no definite action on the request and referred it to the service committee for consideration.

Councilman Boyd Horn, although not against the sewers, said he believed the city should first approve sewage construction to areas in Circleville which had been waiting for service for several years.

He said some people in the south end of town have been "promised sewage service any number of times and I think these people should be taken care of first," Horn declared.

COUNCIL also was asked to take action on the parking of big trucks in the Court and Mill street district late at night while the drivers ate in a nearby restaurant.

COUNCILMAN'S DEBUT IS ROUGH

Doctor Is 'Floored' Twice

Circleville's new city councilman, Dr. Edwin L. Montgomery, made his debut Tuesday evening with a series of pitfalls and pitfalls.

Donning the official cloak of office, the good doctor was directed to his high-backed swivel chair.

One of the casters was broken. Twice the rookie legislator tumbled from chair to floor.

And each time, fellow-councilmen tittered with restrained glee. No titter did Dr. Montgomery utter.

Instead the famed Montgomery bellylaugh billowed through the august chamber, thereby adding the physician's trademark to another sector of civic life.

That explosive outburst of merriment already is well-known in the doctor's office, in the hospital and on the golf course.

Despite the rough start which Dr. Montgomery received, he took the bit in his teeth, steeled himself for the tasks ahead. He was appointed chairman of the health committee and a member of the finance and hospital panels. He had been named to council to fill out the unexpired term of John W. Eshelman who resigned.

He replaces Fred Brown on the health committee and Brown in turn was appointed to fill Eshelman's position on the service committee.

Brown, former chairman of the health committee, told councilmen he had received reports that hogs were being housed in city pens contrary to a city ordinance.

As new head of the health committee, Montgomery was directed to investigate the matter and report it to the city health board.

He said he would take up the report immediately because hogs in the city are a detriment to public health.

Rate Altered At Hospital

Day-By-Day Basis Set By Council

In an effort to pull Berger hospital's operating expenses out of the red, Circleville city council Tuesday night unanimously approved an ordinance establishing minimum rates for specific patients.

Robert Adkins pointed out to his fellow solons that the hospital was losing $3.50 to $10.50 on some maternity and tonsil patients.

Berger hospital, which for years has been operating on a deficit, recently has undergone several changes designed to cut down on expenses.

Under the new bill, instead of patients being charged on a flat rate plan covering three or five-day periods, they will be assessed by the day depending on the room rate.

THE NEW LAW will charge patients for whatever services, drugs, care, linen, operating room expenses they receive rather than have everything included in the flat rate plan.

Adkins said no other hospital in the country operated on the plan which was in use at Berger hospital.

Goble Selected To Head Draft

COLUMBUS, July 21—Governor Herbert today appointed Maj. Gen. Chester W. Goble, who served as Ohio's draft chief during World War II, as the state Selective Service chief in the new draft program.

The governor revealed also that preliminary steps were taken last April, looking toward the establishment of the necessary local draft boards.

Goble will continue to function as Ohio adjutant general and as director of the World War II Compensation Fund. However, he will draw no extra salary.

THE JAPS have been identified by Eight Army officers as Toshio Tashiro, warden of the prison, Masao Koshikawa, chief jailer and second in command; Hatsuaki Kambe, Keiji Kamimoto and Mataishi Okubo, prison guards.

Appropriations Are Made For New Traffic Lights

Two resolutions were among authorizations granted unanimously on first reading Tuesday night by Circleville city council, most of which dealt with financial appropriations for city traffic lights.

The first resolution authorized the board of public utilities to advertise for bids on a new one-million gallon infiltration gallery at the water pump station.

Ervin Leist, water department manager, explained that the addition would be an extension to the present gallery which collects a little less than one-million gallons per day for city use.

Urgency for the new gallery was pointed out by the need for more water, an increased demand for water by industries and that the new well was recommended by the sanitary engineers.

The resolution passed 6-0 in the absence of Councilman Ray Cook.

Steel Price Up

PITTSBURGH, July 21—Increases in the price of U. S. Steel averaging $9.34 a ton went into effect today, and that pattern is expected to spread throughout the industry.

Justice, insofar as international law is concerned, has been meted out in the murder of a Pickaway County War hero—Technical Sergeant Frederick E. Hulse, formerly of Circleville Route 2.

Sergeant Hulse, who lived on Route 2 before he enlisted in the U. S. Air Force, was one of 65 American fliers murdered after they had been captured by the Japanese.

Five officials of the Tokyo Military Prison were tried by the Yokohama Eight Army military commission and were found guilty.

They immediately were sentenced to be hanged.

The five Japs were accused of either slashing, stabbing or burning to death the 65 Americans during a fire which swept the barracks in Tokyo where they were held prisoner.

NEW ATHLETIC FIELD EYED

Educators Set To Take Option On 10 Acres Here

Option is to be taken on 10 acres of land in the north end of the city this week for the proposed building program of the Circleville board of education.

Board members stipulated at their Tuesday night meeting the 10 acres need not be in one block, but may be split into two or more sections.

Originally planning to secure only a five-acre tract suggested for a new elementary school, board members amended their previous resolution Tuesday to include the additional acreage for athletic purposes.

Ray Davis proposed the amendment to the previous resolution, stating that "within 10 years present athletic facilities here will prove inadequate."

WE MUST plan for the future, since the incoming freshman class is to be one of the largest in the history of the school, and a check in the grade schools will show the classes are becoming larger every year."

Present athletic field at the school consists of a football field circumscribed by a cinder track. High school baseball was played at Ted Lewis Park last season.

Davis pointed out a new gymnasium and an industrial arts building are planned by the board to be placed near the present high school building.

The two construction sites being considered for the proposed structures are the Corwin street playground or the present football field.

The board agreed that if a building were placed on the Corwin street playground, another playground would be needed for the grade children at Corwin school. Thus, they believe the football field would be the most logical location.

The 10-acre plot to be optioned by the board would be split in half, according to tentative plans.

FIVE ACRES would go for an elementary school plot and the other five acres for football, track, baseball and other outdoor athletics.

Other business at the meeting included discussion of further necessary repairs to buildings in the Circleville system.

These include repair to the gymnasium floor and redecoration of the auditorium. Members were advised by Virgil Cress, new clerk to the board that the wood flooring had been infested with termites and was unsafe for the coming year.

The mishap occurred at 9 a. m., five miles south, when a trailer-truck driven by Robert H. Davis, 43, of Grove city collided with a car at a bridge entrance.

"Something smelled about that wreck," Radcliff declared "and I don't mean maybe."

The answer was simple for the truck was hauling slaughterhouse refuse including at least one dead cow, for a Columbus rendering firm, he said.

"When I pulled up behind the car, a cow's head resting on the back of the seat, stared blankly at me," he said.

The seventh man was held in $10,000 bail in Detroit and five others are sought by the FBI.

Bail of $30,000 was supplied in U. S. Treasury bonds by Robert W. Dunn, treasurer of the Civil Rights Congress, which maintains a bail fund for such purposes.

The prisoners were headed by William Z. Foster, the Communist Party's chief.

The courtroom was jammed with spectators when the accused walked in calmly.

The 12 are members of the U. S. Communist Party's ruling circle—its national board. They were indicted on two charges of violating the Smith Act of 1940 by conspiring to overthrow the U. S. government by violence, and belonging to an organization advocating overthrow of the government.

ARRESTED with Foster in New York were Eugene Dennis, the party's general secretary; Henry Winston, organizing secretary; Benjamin J. Davis Jr., Communist member of the New York City council and chairman of the party's legislative committee. (Continued on Page Two)

Ray Anderson said of the missive, "I feel sure someone has poisoned Vaden's mind in this matter."

"To begin with, we haven't refused to appropriate the money—matter of fact we haven't acted on the proposal legally."

Anderson pointed out that the mayor and police asked for a time period in which to solicit private funds before council was to act on the matter in an appropriation. The solicitation was to be an action separate from an appropriation by council.

To this Adkins added, "I personally do not object to the public and business firms donating money for the radio—it is for the good of everyone." He added:

"Frankly, I wouldn't blame anyone in the state for not wanting to move to Circleville in view of these circumstances."

Up until now, he continued, people here have not been required to pay for sewer or road and street maintenance.

"It's about time the people of Circleville realize how much they're getting for nothing. They should have to pay for maintenance work the same as in any other city," Adkins declared.

He said Circleville is operating on a 1940 budget. "In my opinion the city is the only business in town operating on costs of eight years ago."

"How can we give as much today on a 1940 budget with prices as high as they are?" Adkins asked.

The two-way radio system still is in the hands of council's finance committee which has yet to report on the matter.

Sanitary sewers for a proposed north end housing addition was among a string of requests presented for consideration Tuesday night to Circleville city council.

Service Director Joseph Rooney said Frank Pump of Chillicothe has asked for sewage to be extended to Atwater and Wilson avenues, the area in which 18 prefabricated homes are planned for construction.

Council, however, took no definite action on the request and referred it to the service committee for consideration.

Councilman Boyd Horn, although not against the sewers, said he believed the city should first approve sewage construction to areas in Circleville which had been waiting for service for several years.

He said some people in the south end of town have been "promised sewage service any number of times and I think these people should be taken care of first," Horn declared.

COUNCIL also was asked to take action on the parking of big trucks in the Court and Mill street district late at night while the drivers ate in a nearby restaurant.

Residents of that area said the constant din of blaring radios, racing engines and loud talk kept them awake in the early hours of the morning.

Although no definite steps were taken to combat the situation, Councilman E. L. Montgomery suggested contacting the state highway patrol to re-route the heavy truck traffic over Route 104.

Councilman Robert Adkins suggested routing the trucks from Court street down Main street to Western avenue then south to Ohio street and back onto Court again.

It was pointed out, however, that residents along the new route would suffer as much as the ones on the present route. (Continued on Page Two)

He said he would take up the report immediately because hogs in the city are a detriment to public health.

Appropriations Are Made For New Traffic Lights

Two resolutions were among authorizations granted unanimously on first reading Tuesday night by Circleville city council, most of which dealt with financial appropriations for city traffic lights.

The first resolution authorized the board of public utilities to advertise for bids on a new one-million gallon infiltration gallery at the water pump station.

Ervin Leist, water department manager, explained that the addition would be an extension to the present gallery which collects a little less than one-million gallons per day for city use.

Urgency for the new gallery was pointed out by the need for more water, an increased demand for water by industries, and that the new well was recommended by the sanitary engineers.

The resolution passed 6-0 in the absence of Councilman Ray Cook.

THE SECOND resolution authorized the board of public utilities to advertise for bids to furnish and install a heating system in the water pumping station.

Leist told councilmen the plant was without heat now that the steam pumps were eliminated to make way for the new electric equipment which was installed July 11.

He said plans called for heating only the small pump room and the room in which the new pump is located. The rest of the station will remain unheated.

Council also approved an ordinance to include the sum of $474 to the department of public service for payment of three new traffic lights now on order with the Simplex Light Co. of Chicago.

The new traffic lights will be located on Pickaway street at Main, Franklin and Mound streets.

Tashiro was found guilty of ordering his subordinates not to release the 65 American prisoners from their cells during the fire and to kill any prisoners who tried to escape.

He failed to provide a plan for the protection of the prisoners from the hazards of war.

Koshikawa was convicted of failing to provide for the release of the prisoners when the fire broke out and also with entering into conspiracy with Tashiro to prevent the U. S. government from ascertaining correct information in regard to the fate of the prisoners.

In Detroit, the FBI picked up Carl Winter, identified as chairman of the Michigan Communist Party.

Still sought are:

Robert G. Hall, the Ohio Communist Party boss, has a long record of Communist Party attachment.

The Clevelanders have been a member of the party for 20 years and is a member of the party's national board.

It was testified before the Dies committee in 1938 that Hall directed the bloody Warren, O., steel strike, usurped the authority of the police, stopped the U. S. mails and gave orders to dynamite squads.

The indictment was returned by a blue ribbon federal grand jury in New York after a 13-month investigation of Communist activities ordered by President Truman on March 22, 1947.

FOSTER and Dennis greeted their arrest with outraged cries of persecution. Noting that it comes on the eve of the convention of Henry Wallace's third party, they charged:

"The American people can now see to what desperate provocations Truman is driven in an effort to win the election, by hook or crook. Terrified of the growing support for the Wallace-Taylor ticket, the Democratic high command is seeking to brand the new party as 'criminal.'"

DAYTON, July 21—A trap set by police to halt assaults on women near Dayton's St. Elizabeth hospital was responsible today for the death of a suspect.

A man tentatively identified as Oscar Brooks, 30, of Chattanooga, Tenn., was killed although a companion escaped.

Police said two patrolmen, one dressed as a woman, waited in a parked car near the hospital. Two men approached and one, brandishing a knife, tried to enter.

The patrolman back of the wheel got out the other side of the car and fired two warning shots as one of the men began to run. A third shot, fired when the suspect failed to halt, killed him.

Prison Official, Family, Feared To Be Kidnaped

MANSFIELD, July 21—An official of the Ohio State men's reformatory, his wife and their daughter disappeared under mysterious circumstances today and officials termed it kidnapping.

Missing from their home were John Elmer Niebel, 50-year-old manager of the reformatory farm; his 50-year-old wife, and their 22-year-old daughter, Phyllis.

Also missing from the Niebel home were a shotgun, a 22-caliber revolver and a 38 automatic.

Sheriff Frank E. Robinson called in the Federal Bureau of Investigation, the Ohio state highway patrol and other outside agencies to aid in the investigation.

"It looks to me and the rest of the boys here as if it were kidnapping," Robinson said. "We can't find anything else. Both of the family's automobiles were in the garage. Nothing but the guns were taken. It looks now to us definitely like kidnapping, probably by someone who has a grudge against Niebel."

The disappearance was discovered when a reformatory employee found the front and rear doors of the Niebel home open and no one around.

Council finally settled the long-debated question of erection of a signal light on North Court street at the Forest cemetery entrance.

Agency Reports Reds Planting New Barricades

BERLIN, July 21—The German News Agency DENA reported today that the Russians are erecting barricades on roads and in fields near the American zonal boundary west of Berlin to repel any blockade-running attempt.

These preparations were said to be in addition to routine precautionary measures the Soviets would be expected to take in attempting to halt passage of an armored train to blockaded Western Berlin.

DENA said the Russians are planting pikes slantwise over all possible routes similar to the anti-tank "asparagus patch" barriers of war days.

The Soviets sent out new warnings of stepped-up air activity, saying their planes would stage high altitude training flights at from 15,000 to 18,000 feet from the Perleberg airfield in the British corridor from Hamburg.

Russian newspapers claimed that food in plenty will be available if the Western Allies leave Berlin.

The Russian-controlled DENA slanted their propaganda to a line aimed at convincing German residents of the western sectors that coal and raw materials as well would be available for immediate distribution on the departure of the Allies.

Solons Hear Requests

The discussion was dropped for the present.

City Solicitor George Gerhardt told council he had been asked to make a complaint to council about the Norfolk and Western Railway raising its tracks near Pickaway street causing water to drain on private property in that district.

THE SOLICITOR was directed by council to investigate the matter with N and W officials and make a report at next council meeting.

Council also was petitioned for electric lights on Rosewood avenue at Ted Lewis Park. The latter said the darkened street is hazardous to pedestrians and drivers.

It was pointed out that the park lights are turned out after a ball game is over, leaving the area in complete darkness. Council also heard proposals for a safety walk leading from the park to Court street.

The proposals were placed in the hands of the service committee.

Not Asking GOP Platform Be Put In Law-Truman

WASHINGTON, July 21—The White House announced today that President Truman will appear in person before Congress next Tuesday to press his fight for "progressive" legislation at the special session.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross announced that Mr. Truman will address a joint session Tuesday at 12 noon (EDT).

The President authorized a statement that he is not asking the special session to translate the GOP platform into law.

Ross said the President is asking Congress to finish work on highly important legislation which failed of enactment before the recess June 20.

Ross added that the chief executive will seek new legislation on only two matters:

1. He will submit a new anti-inflation bill.

2. He will ask a new measure providing for entry into the United States of an additional 200,000 displaced persons, replacing the measure which he denounced as "anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic."

Otherwise, Ross said, the President will request action on legislation long ago submitted to Congress, and on which either one house or the other has acted, or which is pending before committees.

New Labor Boss Is Awaited

WASHINGTON, July 21—President Truman is expected to fill the one remaining vacancy in his cabinet this week.

White House sources indicated today he may name a new secretary of labor at his news conference tomorrow morning.

The post has been vacant for five weeks following the death of Louis Schwellenbach.

The President has purposely waited to fill the vacancy until after the Democratic convention was concluded.

Robert Wagner Jr., son of the Democratic senator from New York, has been most prominently mentioned for the cabinet vacancy.

Every Diplomatic Plan To Be Tried In Berlin Case

WASHINGTON, July 21—Secretary of State Marshall solemnly pledged today that the United States will invoke every possible diplomatic procedure in the Berlin crisis "to avoid the tragedy of war for the world."

Marshall reiterated, however, that the U. S. "will not be coerced or intimidated in any way" in maintaining its rights in Berlin and all Germany.

The nation's top diplomatic spokesman gave this new statement on the U. S. position in the Berlin impasse with Russia as he awaited the arrival in Washington of Gen. Lucius Clay, U. S. military governor in Germany, for consultation on the acute situation.

Clay, and Robert Murphy, his political adviser with the rank of ambassador, are scheduled to arrive at Washington National Airport between 5 and 6 p. m. (EST) today.

Marshall declined to discuss the Berlin situation further. He said he expected to see Clay tomorrow, but he refused to predict the next move on the part of the Western Powers or its probable timing.

The Army announced that Secretary Royall, who ordered the general home to report on the Berlin crisis, would be on hand to meet Clay at the airport.

The June financial report for Berger hospital shows $5,329.10 in total expenses and $5,473.70 in total collections. This was one of the few months this year when the hospital showed a gain over expenses.

Agency Reports Reds Planting New Barricades

BERLIN, July 21—The German News Agency DENA reported today that the Russians are erecting barricades on roads and in fields near the American zonal boundary west of Berlin to repel any blockade-running attempt.

These preparations were said to be in addition to routine precautionary measures the Soviets would be expected to take in attempting to halt passage of an armored train to blockaded Western Berlin.

DENA said the Russians are planting pikes slantwise over all possible routes similar to the anti-tank "asparagus" barriers of war days.

The Soviets sent out new warnings of stepped-up air activity, saying their planes would stage high altitude training flights at from 15,000 to 18,000 feet from the Perleberg airfield in the British corridor from Hamburg.

Russian newspapers claimed that food in plenty will be available if the Western Allies leave Berlin.

The Russian-controlled organs slanted their propaganda to a line aimed at convincing German residents of the western sectors that coal and raw materials as well would be available for immediate distribution on the departure of the Allies.

Kansas Getting Flash Floods

EMPORIA, Kan., July 21—Flash floods threatened large areas of Southeast and Central Kansas today as rain-choked rivers poured over their banks.

Emporia, lying between the Neosho and Cottonwood rivers, was practically isolated as the Cottonwood reached a record high of 28.4 feet. East, west and south highways were cut off by the two rivers and water flooded the city's main thoroughfare for the first time in history.

DEATHS and Funerals

CHARLES E. HALL

Charles E. Hall, 80, life long resident of Circleville died at 9:20 a. m. Wednesday in the South Scioto street Home and Hospital.

Born in Circleville May 13, 1860, he was a son of Thomas and Jane Davidson Hall.

His first wife, Emma Kennedy Hall, preceded him in death. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Belle Bordeaux Hall, of 211 East High street.

The Rev. Alonzo Hill will officiate for funeral services at 2 p. m. Friday in the Defenbaugh Chapel.

Burial will be made in Forest cemetery.

Friends may call in the Defenbaugh funeral home Thursday evening.

Solons Hear Requests

 The discussion was dropped for the present.

City Solicitor George Gerhardt told council he had been asked to make a complaint to council about the Norfolk and Western Railway raising its tracks near Pickaway street causing water to drain on private property in that district.

THE SOLICITOR was directed by council to investigate the matter with N and W officials and make a report at next council meeting.

Council also was petitioned for electric lights on Rosewood avenue at Ted Lewis Park. The letter said the darkened street is hazardous to pedestrians and drivers.

It was pointed out that the park lights are turned out after a ball game is over, leaving the area in complete darkness. Council also heard proposals for a safety walk leading from the park to Court street.

The proposals were placed in the hands of the service committee.

Not Asking GOP Platform Be Put In Law-Truman

WASHINGTON, July 21—The White House announced today that President Truman will appear in person before Congress next Tuesday to press his fight for "progressive" legislation at the special session.

President Truman said he is not asking the special session to translate the GOP platform into law.

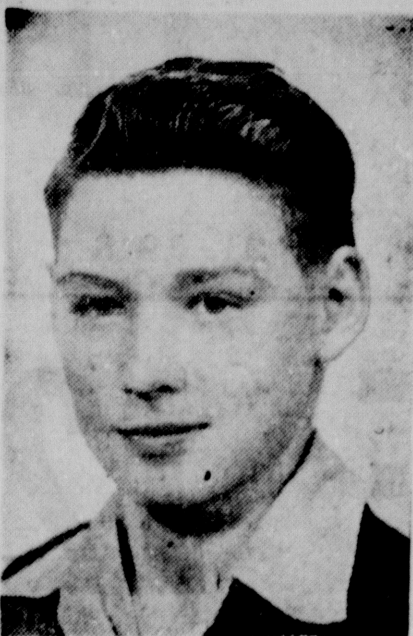

Ross said the President is asking Congress to finish work on highly important legislation which failed of enactment before the recess June 20.

Ross added that the chief executive will seek new legislation on only two matters:

1. He will submit a new anti-inflation bill.

2. He will ask a new measure providing for entry into the United States of an additional 200,000 displaced persons, replacing the measure which he denounced as "anti-Semitic and anti-Catholic."

Otherwise, Ross said, the President will request action on legislation long ago submitted to Congress, and on which either one house or the other has acted, or which is pending before committees.

CHARLES Williams, 14-year-old boy evangelist from Yel-lowbud, will lead services at 8 p. m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday in the Christian Union church on East Ohio street, Circleville. Two services will be conducted by the lad Sunday at 10:30 a. m. and 7:30 p. m.

Every Diplomatic Plan To Be Tried In Berlin Case

WASHINGTON, July 21—Secretary of State Marshall solemnly pledged today that the United States will invoke every possible diplomatic procedure in the Berlin crisis "to avoid the tragedy of war for the world."

Marshall reiterated, however, that the U. S. "will not be coerced or intimidated in any way" in maintaining its rights in Berlin and all Germany.

The nation's top diplomatic spokesman gave this new statement on the U. S. position in the Berlin impasse with Russia as he awaited the arrival in Washington of Gen. Lucius Clay, U. S. military governor in Germany, for consultation on the acute situation.

Clay, and Robert Murphy, his political adviser with the rank of ambassador, are scheduled to arrive at Washington National Airport between 3 and 6 p. m. (EST) today.

Marshall declined to discuss the Berlin situation further. He said he expected to see Clay tomorrow. But he refused to predict the next move on the part of the Western Powers or its probable timing.

The Army announced that Secretary Royall, who ordered the general home to report on the Berlin crisis, would be on hand to meet Clay at the airport.

New Labor Boss Is Awaited

WASHINGTON, July 21—President Truman is expected to fill the one remaining vacancy in his cabinet this week.

White House sources indicated today he may name a new secretary of labor at his news conference tomorrow morning.

The post has been vacant for five weeks following the death of Louis Schwellenbach.

The President has purposely waited to fill the vacancy until after the Democratic convention was concluded.

Robert Wagner Jr., son of the Democratic senator from New York, has been most prominently mentioned for the cabinet vacancy.

THE SEARING STORY OF THE TREASURE'S TOUGH GUYS!

STRATEGY STILL LACKING

Plenty Of Confusion
Expected On Capitol Hill

WASHINGTON, July 21 — It looks like one thing is certain—there's going to be plenty of confusion around Washington this Summer.

There were plenty of indications of it even before the President issued his call for a special session of Congress. Now everything's been doubled and redoubled, in spades!

At the moment, neither party seems to have its strategy quite straightened out, and from all the signs the special session will be pretty well underway before the boys get together.

Yesterday, for instance, there was some talk around Democratic headquarters that the President might mix up all the semi-mutual points of the Democratic and Republican platforms and toss them at Congress in one package.

The theory was that he would make a purported "bipartisan" speech urging the passage of all this legislation to meet the various domestic crises.

BUT NO sooner does this guy from Demo headquarters get through making the foregoing prediction when along comes a character from the White House and says it's not going to be that way. He allows as how the President is going to break both platforms up into separate planks and then present each issue to Congress by individual messages.

"This way," the lad said, "there'll be no confusion over what the issue is. Taking them one at a time that way, the people will know exactly what's being voted on—and it won't be so easy to fool the..."

"Also," interjected a cynical scribe, "it will give the President just that much more newspaper space and free radio time—an item not to be overlooked during election year!"

One Republican senator said: "It won't make any difference whether he brings them out one at a time or all together. It's like bowling. If there's just one pin setting up there, you knock it down.

"If they're all up, you roll a strike and knock 'em all down. If you miss, you still pick up what's left with a spare!"

But another member of Congress disagreed completely.

"This never has been an obstructionist Congress, despite what the Democrats say," he argued, "and it won't be one this time. If the legislation involving the planks in the Republican platform is properly presented and properly phrased, we'd just as soon pass it before election—then the people would know we meant what we said at Philadelphia."

IT WAS POINTED out that that business about proper presentation and proper phrasing could cover a lot of obstruction, but he refused to admit that it might be used for GOP trickery.

"As a matter of fact," he said, "a small gleam appearing in his eye, 'if the President wants a strong civil rights bill passed, we Republicans will be perfectly happy to vote for it. However, I've heard some of the Democrats may try to, er, obstruct it."

Some Democrats still weren't quite convinced that the special session was such a good idea, although the majority said they thought it was the only thing.

But the staff of one senator who sits on the Democratic side of the floor was quite enthusiastic about it. Just the thing, he said.

The senator himself wasn't around. He was up in Philadelphia, preparing to get nominated as vice-presidential candidate on Henry Wallace's third party ticket. But he'll be back—yes, he'll be back.

"No wonder Senator Taylor doesn't mind a special session," said a fellow senator who has no love for his Idaho colleague. "He can make his campaign speeches right on the Senate floor now—and draw a bigger crowd and get a better press than if he was out trying to stump the country! But we'll have to sit there and listen to him!"

THE HUNGRY CHILDREN

AMERICANS thought they had been reasonably generous to all the causes presented to them—and so they had. Yet suddenly they are told that in a world drive for needy and underfed children they have failed to reach one-fifth of their goal. It astonishes most of us—yet is easy to understand.

Americans have sent CARE packages, and food and clothing boxes to individuals or groups they knew about. They have given to dozens of causes which include feeding hungry children of Europe, India, China.

Then came the Marshall Plan, by which, Americans thought, all the needed things would be done through their taxes. There has been less griping over taxes than might have been expected, because taxpayers believed they were thus doing their bit, doing it better through concerted government action than could be done through separate drives. There has been some publicity connected with this United Nations drive for children, but for the most part it fell on ears deafened by previous drives of all sorts, on minds which believed ERP would do it.

This sort of thing often happens where there are Community Chests. People strain for the one big drive, believing themselves through for the year. Then along come half a dozen other causes, worthy enough, but under the circumstances merely an aggravation to the citizen who feels justly aggrieved at being asked all over again after he has done his share.

This time we shall have to dig a gain. ERP is a big, businesslike affair to help whole peoples rebuild, replant, dig out, reconstruct. It is starting out well. But there remain thousands of children unfed, uncared for right now. General Eisenhower says peace is shaky while half the children of the world search garbage heaps for food. Half a dollar apiece—if everyone gave—would put it over comfortably. Why not give a dollar? Suppose the hungry child were here?

But cannot public relations stuff in general be less wordy and sentimental, more clear and explanatory? Americans will always rise to a need they understand, but they no longer read or listen to the sloppy stuff.

"Slowly comes a hungry people, as a lion, creeping nigher, Glazes at one that nods and winks behind a slowly dying fire."
So wrote the poet Tennyson a century ago. Berlin papers please copy.

These Days

It is now clear that the principal target of Democratic oratory during the campaign will be the Eightieth Congress, its achievements and shortcomings. President Truman called it the worst Congress; Senator Barkley in his keynote speech hit at it with all the rounded oratory of a Kentuckian. Sam Rayburn detailed the trivial in his attacks on that Congress. It is understandable that the Democrats would hold the Eightieth Congress accountable; it is also undeniable that the Republicans must stand by that Congress and defend it. It is not necessary for the debate to be cheap, vulgar or untruthful.

In the first place, whereas the Republicans had a clear and unmistakable majority in the House of Representatives, they only had an organizational majority in the Senate. This is one of the complexities of the American constitutional system which tends to weaken party leadership and party responsibility. Whatever measures, therefore, were passed in the Senate by the so-called Republican majority were really passed by a coalition of Republican and Democratic votes which made up for the Republican defections. The Taft-Hartley bill was passed in both houses by such a coalition.

Barkley indicated the nature of the Democratic attack on the Eightieth Congress. First and foremost will be opposition to the Taft-Hartley Act.

In hitting at that the Democrats are repeating the error of the Republicans in 1932, when they assumed that there was still another victory in Prohibition. The Democrats apparently believe that there is still another victory in the tie-up between their party and the labor leaders. The Republicans will respond by pointing to the large number of Democrats who on every ballot voted for the Taft Hartley bill, but even more, they will point to the fact that the law does work. If, as Barkley indicated, the Democrats are to attack this Congress on the record of the Taft-Hartley Act, the Republicans ought to welcome the attack.

The next object of attack will be the Republican promise of economy, reduction of taxes and the firing of unnecessary bureaucrats. There Barkley was unfair and he knew it. After the Republicans had cut the budget and reduced the taxes, the Administration created what amounted to a war scare. It was Mr. Truman who let the Army, Navy and Air Forces down after the peace, reducing staff and personnel with an unconscionable rapidity.

On the matter of bureaucrats, Barkley's definition was clever and facetious, but it failed to say that the Eightieth Congress and the President appointed a commission headed by Herbert Hoover to consider the reorganization of the executive branch of the government. Barkley knows that his party, along with all constructive citizens, is deeply concerned over the sprawling, duplicative, excessively staffed Administration—and that is why the Hoover commission came into being.

Why then did he pull that wise crack about bureaucrats? To get a rise out of the convention? To draw applause? To start cheering among a roomful of bureaucrats? Well, he got what he wanted—but it was not the truth. It was just campaign talk.

STARS FINESSE DEEPLY

YOU SHOULD be on your toes in noting your use of small cards when you are up against a really fine player. Why? Simply because the stars make many more deep finesse than the average grade of player. It is therefore incumbent upon you to be careful about what you do with your small or medium-sized cards. The question of whether to "split honors" by sticking in a jack from jack-queen or 10 from jack-ten on a small card lead, or even the application of the same principles to lower touchers, can decide whether your side gets a good or bad score on a deal.

One of the best of all the veteran cardmen in St. Louis, Scott Miller, got himself a top score on this deal in a tournament game by managing his small cards to greatest effect. He began benefiting from his skill in that regard from the very first trick after he was in the lead.

The spade 4 was ducked to the K and the 6 came back to the 3. 10 and A. and then he put forth the diamond 2 from the dummy.

When West played his 4 instead of splitting his honors, the 9 was inserted and proved high enough to push out the A. Noting that a spade lead now would cost a trick, East shifted to the heart 3, which drew the 5 and K. The heart 9 lead was won by the A so that the dummy could lead the diamond 3. Once again West offended by his super-economy through playing the 5 when he should have used the 10. The 8 therefore won that trick. The diamond Q, club A, diamond K, heart 10 to the Q and spade Q were run to give the declarer a total of eight tricks.

That was better than any other No Trump declarer made, due to North's scoring of three tricks in diamonds. No other declarer got more than two in the suit, and West could have limited Mr. Miller to that number by merely using a diamond honor early enough to help.

CHAPTER FORTY-FIVE

JOAN was his liveliest self that evening. The dimples came and went, and she admired almost everything. The setting, the heavy timbers of the studding—"So this is the famous skid-deck!" she murmured, resting her hand on one of the uprights. "You should have heard me cursing at what that grey paint did to his saw!" She was so complimentary, in fact, that Andrew felt as if he had better keep his fingers crossed. All too often, in the past, she had brought him crashing from the heights. Yet he could not help rising to them when she praised him and his work.

And there was reason for this tonight. Joan was not the usual girl, uninformed on these matters. She knew what she was talking about and that made her comments twice as sweet to Andrew.

They stood for a long time, on the north side of the house, talking in low voices in the gathering dusk. Andrew found himself telling her the details of his plan for the development—how every house would be fundamentally the same, yet each would have some alteration of arrangement to conform to its individual setting, and each would have features which would differentiate it from the others.

"One will have a large bedroom and a small one, for instance," he said, "while others will have two bedrooms of equal size. One will have a built-in corner cupboard in the dining room, another will have bookcases or cupboards in the living room, on either side of the fireplace. But they will all be approximately the same size, and they'll all have simple roofs, for inexpensive construction and because they weather better anyhow, and they'll all have the same general set-up."

"It's going to look lovely, Andrew, when it's done. It will be something to be proud of. Isn't it a shame that the Baron houses will be next to them, though? They are so hideous—like little cheap boxes, not fit to be homes!"

It was dark when they rounded the corner and moved down toward the street. The night had been so lovely they had walked from her apartment. Joan turned to give the new house one last glance, and gasped. "Andy!" she cried. "A fire! Look!"

Andrew wheeled instantly. On the south side of the house, where the heavy planks from the skid-deck were piled, a flicker of flame showed. He began running even before he quite realized what it could mean. A man's silhouette showed briefly against the wavering light. He was bent, hunched. A hobo, Andrew thought, raising his voice in a shout. The man straightened, started to run, and his massive figure and lumbering gait betrayed him. Jake Baron!

He did not hear Joan's indignant recital of Jake Baron's attempt to sabotage the development with a carefully built fire of paper, kerosene and kerosene, which—thank heaven—he had not had time to pour on the flames. He did not hear the man call for some of his friends to keep watch over the half-finished house that night, nor know when the police were notified. He was slipping into a com-

Andrew vereed right to head him off. His long legs flew over the ground, his speed augmented by a furious anger. If Jake Baron destroyed his work, he would kill him! It was hard to see, now that darkness had come. Jake was heading up the hill toward the woods. Andrew put on another spurt. There was a sudden blinding flash of red before his eyes. It spread to a red glow, then died to black.

An explosion, he thought dimly. But what was there to explode? And then he remembered Joan, back there near the house. Had she been in it? He struggled to rise, groaned, and fell back. At once a soft hand pressed upon him, a voice with tears in it said, "Thank God you're alive, Andy!"

Could that be Joan? He had never heard her voice sound like that. Maybe it was somebody else. And Joan still had to be rescued. He tried to struggle upward again, and this time she helped him. "Lean against me," she said. "It was Joan! But how had she gotten here? And where was he? Everything was so dark."

"The fire!" he said suddenly.

She held his head against her, and her hands were soft and soothing. "It's out," she said. "I took a piece of wood, and scattered it. He was just setting it, you see. . . . Andy, do you think you could get up if I helped you?"

"Of course," he said thickly. But it wasn't as easy as all that. He had to struggle to his knees first. First one leg, then the other. All the time with his weight on Joan. She bowed under it, but she did not flinch. He gritted his teeth against the pain which washed over him with every move, and his breath rasped in his throat. The effort was almost unendurable. Dizzy and exhausted, he wanted nothing more than to lie still. Perhaps he said something like that, for Joan urged him on.

"No, Andy, I'm afraid to leave you here. He might come back. And we've got to go for help!"

So he struggled once more and at last stood upright. Not exactly upright, he thought with a dim attempt at humor, but at least he could not be called recumbent, either. Later, he remembered nothing of the walk to the nearest house, of half sitting, half lying on the porch steps while Joan telephoned for the ambulance, and the good householder and his wife tried to staunch the bleeding from his cut.

He did not hear Joan's indignant recital of Jake Baron's attempt to sabotage the development with a carefully built fire of paper, kerosene and kerosene, which—thank heaven—he had not had time to pour on the flames. He did not hear the man call for some of his friends to keep watch over the half-finished house that night, nor know when the police were notified. He was slipping into a comtorable drowsiness in which there was nothing but a soft, warm, all-enveloping darkness.

He woke to a strange room and a strange face. A thin face, with a frizz of greying hair surrounding it, the whole surrounded by a starched white cap. "You're a nurse," he announced.

"Good." She smiled at him, and the smile changed her face and gave it a kind of beauty.

"And this is the hospital." Only a hospital room would have quite this impersonal, scoured look.

"You are all right," she chuckled. "Nothing wrong with your brains, I guess."

"Brains?" he echoed. Then memory returned. "Joan!" he cried. "Is she safe?"

"There's nothing the matter with her that eight hours of sleep won't cure," the nurse said with a twinkle. "She sat up all night with you, wouldn't she go home, or would be in better shape than she was if she didn't?"

He put up an experimental hand, felt the bandages swathing his skull. "What have I got?" he asked curiously. "A scrambled cerebrum?"

"You wouldn't be talking like this if you had," she answered. "And you really shouldn't be talking at all. But Dr. Campbell said I could tell you what was said if you'd promise to go to sleep again."

"I promise. Now, what is what?"

"You had a mild concussion, but you're going to be fine if you'll be quiet for a few days. Dr. Campbell stitched up the cut in your scalp, and said anybody else would have had a fractured skull, but you must be a true New Hampshireman, you're so hard-headed."

"And Baron?"

"He's been arrested. They got the kerosene can, and it's been identified as one he had filled yesterday afternoon. . . . Now, that's enough." She got up and rustled from the room.

Andrew lay there, thinking. The house was safe now. Louis Baron wouldn't dare try anything further, since his son was caught red-handed. In fact, Andrew wouldn't be surprised if he could have his pick of the workmen now. Brandish men were not the kind who would willingly work for Baron after this.

But these matters were not nearly so important as that other thing the nurse had told him. Joan was all right. She wasn't hurt at all. And she had stayed with him at the hospital all night, refusing to go home. His eyes sought the side of the bed. She must have sat right there, and waned, and a little grumpy, her proud head drooping with fatigue. And with this mental picture clear before him, Andrew fell asleep, a contented smile on his tired face.

My New York

By MEL HEIMER

NEW YORK—Just a couple of months ago they were living down in Twelfth street in the Village, living the nervous, hectic, sometimes hilarious and often melancholy life that residence in that fey sector brings—but now they were standing in the dark up at the end of the rocky path by the old house, swinging a flashlight from side to side to guide you as you drove up the hobbledly-gobbledly lane.

You finally got the car straightened out in the deep ruts and you swung it up in front of the rough lawn and pulled the hand brake. You got out and said hello and they said, well, you finally got here, and the people in the car with you, who knew them, got out and introduced everybody all around.

You were 25 miles from the heart of Times Square and, for the first time in your life, you were on the scene of that deadly operation known as remodeling an old farm house.

"Remember," they said, "this place is 150 years old and we've got an awful lot to do to it." You smiled and said why, don't make apologies, from what we can see here in the dark you've done wonders, you really have. Why, you've—well, you've painted it, haven't you?

They said they had, four coats worth, and using that as a starting place they began to go through the Cook's tour of the grounds methodically. He is a writer and she is an artist and they got the house last winter for six thousand, after waiting for it to drop slowly from ten.

When you were a child you may remember there always seemed to be a house in your neighborhood wherein was locked a madman—always behind bars and always in a room hidden away on the second floor—and if there wasn't, someone always said there was. This was one of those houses, it seems.

PLAYING THE FLASHLIGHT CAREFULLY along the ground, they led you down a grassy, pebbly bank. Two mosquitoes caught you on either ankle, halfway down, and as you wondered now they could bite through your trouser leg, they played the flashlight on a little brook at the bottom of the bank, cool and dark and gurgling.

They explained how the property halfway up the bank on the other side was theirs and how they were going to dam up the little brook in the natural little valley and make a little swimming pool.

In the dark woods, fireflies winked methodically. The air was fresh and damp, not smoky, and yet as you watched the fireflies you couldn't help thinking of fight night at Madison Square Garden, with the cigarettes being lighted in the dark of the mezzanine.

There were soft little lanes leading off in several directions from the house and they explained that they had been dug for sewage disposal.

Inside the kitchen, flies and little bugs evidently had seeped in through the screen door, for they played around the ceiling light and edged their way along the cracked ceiling itself.

The rooms still were dusty and filled with assorted furniture and packing boxes and the single bulbs overhead, glaring and harsh, made you think of the times in your youth when you had waited in rooms that were lighted so—for working papers, maybe, or to see somebody about a job, or somewhere like that.

THERE WERE GREAT GRAY BLOTTO DESIGNS in the corners of most of the ceilings. "Rain," they said, explaining that they now had the elements under control.

Upstairs on the second floor, the musty air of many years was hot and overpowering, hatboxes and towels and shoes still in their trees were sprinkled around the bedroom. Remember, they had lived here only a couple of months, they had, as they said, an awful lot to do to it.

They had torn down a veranda in front, and the facade of the old house swept up sheer and white in the dark suburban night, with a pile of rubble and boards in front. The pungent-sweet odor of a stable drifted over from somewhere beyond the dark woods in the back.

He said rather testily that he was trying to take legal action to get rid of the darn snail; she stood by and looked at her shoes without saying anything.

You stood there in front of the house, nobody saying anything by now, and finally he sighed and looked straight in front of him, at the headlights of cars slipping by on the highway, through the trees. "I can tell you one thing," he said, softly. "I wouldn't do it again."

Then you got into the car, jiggled slowly and haltingly down the path to the highway and turned in the direction of the big town.

The tires went strap-strap on the concrete and you got moving pretty fast and you began thinking of the soda in the refrigerator, and the cool, comfortable living room and the deep, fascinating city noises, and home.

THE HUNGRY CHILDREN

AMERICANS thought they had been reasonably generous to all the causes presented to them—and so they had. Yet suddenly they are told that in a world drive for needy and underfed children they have failed to reach one-fifth of their goal. It astonishes most of us—yet is easy to understand.

Americans have sent CARE packages, and food and clothing boxes to individuals or groups they knew about. They have given to dozens of causes which include feeding hungry children of Europe, India, China.

Then came the Marshall Plan, by which, Americans thought, all the needed things would be done through their taxes. There has been less griping over taxes than might have been expected, because taxpayers believed they were thus doing their bit, doing it better through concerted government action than could be done through separate drives. There has been some publicity connected with this United Nations drive for children, but for the most part it fell on ears deafened by previous drives of all sorts, on minds which believed ERP would do it.

This sort of thing often happens where there are Community Chests. People strain for the one big drive, believing themselves through for the year. All too often, in the past, she had brought him crashing from the heights. Yet he could not help rising to them when she praised him and his work.

And there was reason for this tonight. Joan was not the usual girl, uninformed on these matters. She knew what she was talking about when it came to building, and that made her comments twice as sweet to Andrew.

They stood, for a long time, on the north side of the house, talking in low voices in the gathering dusk. Andrew found himself telling her the details of his plan for the development—how every house would be fundamentally the same, yet each would have some alteration of arrangement to conform to its individual setting, and each would have features which would differentiate it from the others.

"One will have a large bedroom and a small one, for instance," he said, "while others will have two bedrooms of equal size. One will have a built-in corner cupboard in the dining room, another will have bookcases or cupboards in the living room, on either side of the fireplace. But they will all be approximately the same size, and they'll all have simple roofs, for inexpensive construction and because they weather better anyhow, and they'll all have the same general set-up."

"It's going to look lovely, Andrew, when it's done. It will be something to be proud of. Isn't it a shame that the Baron houses will be next to them, though? They are so hideous—like little cheap boxes, not fit to be homes!"

It was dark when they rounded the corner and moved down toward the street. The night had been so lovely they had walked from her apartment. Joan turned to give the new house one last glance, and gasped. "Andy!" she cried. "A fire! Look!"

Andrew wheeled instantly. On the south side of the house, where the heavy planks from the skid-deck were piled, a flicker of flame showed. He began running even before he quite realized what it could mean. A man's silhouette showed briefly against the wavering light. He was big, and crouched. A hobo, Andrew thought, raising his voice in a shout. But in the next instant he knew. The man straightened, started to run, and his massive figure and humming gait betrayed him. Jake Baron!

Andrew veered right to head him off. His long legs flew over the ground, his speed augmented by a furious anger. If Jake Baron destroyed his work, he would kill him! It was hard to see, now that darkness had come. Jake was heading up the hill toward the woods. Andrew put on another spurt. There was a sudden blinding flash of red before his eyes. It spread to a red glow, then died to black.

An explosion, he thought dimly. But what was there to explode? And then he remembered Joan, back there near the house. Had she been in it? He struggled to rise, groaned, and fell back. At once a soft hand pressed upon him, a voice with tears in it said, "Thank God you're alive, Andy!"

Could that be Joan? He had never heard her voice sound like that. Maybe it was somebody else. And Joan still had to be rescued. He tried to struggle upward again, and this time she helped him. "Lean against me," she said. "I was Joan! But how had she gotten here? And where was he?"

"The fire!" he said suddenly. She held his head against her, and her hands were soft and soothing. "It's out," she said. "I took a piece of wood, and scattered it. He was just setting it, you see. . . . Andy, do you think you could get up if I helped you?"

"Of course," he said thickly. But it wasn't as easy as all that. He had to struggle to get his knees first. Then one leg, then the other. All the time with his weight on Joan. She bowed under it, but she did not flinch. He gritted his teeth against the pain which washed over him with every move, and his breath rasped in his throat. The effort was almost unendurable. Dizzy and exhausted, he wanted nothing more than to lie still. Perhaps he said something like that, for Joan urged him on.

"No, Andy, I'm afraid to leave you here. He might come back. And we've got to go for help!"

So he struggled once more and at last stood upright. Not exactly upright, he thought with a dim attempt at humor, but at least he could not be called recumbent. Later, he remembered nothing of the walk to the nearest house, of half sitting, half lying on the porch steps while Joan telephoned for the ambulance, and the good householder and his wife tried to staunch the bleeding from his cut.

He did not hear Joan's indignant recital of Jake Baron's attempt to sabotage the development with a carefully built fire of paper, kindling and kerosene, which—thank heaven—he had not had time to pour on the flames. He did not hear the man call for some of his friends to keep watch over the half-finished house that night, nor know when the police were notified. He was slipping into a comfortable drowsiness in which there was nothing but a soft, warm, all-enveloping darkness.

He woke to a strange room and a strange face. A thin face, with a frizz of grey hair surrounding it, the whole surmounted by a starched white cap. "You're a nurse," he announced.

"Good," she smiled at him, and the smile changed her face and gave it a kind of beauty.

"And this is the hospital." Only a hospital room would have quite this impersonal, scoured look.

"You are all right," she chuckled. "Nothing wrong with your brains, I guess."

"Brains?" he echoed. Then memory returned. "Joan!" he cried. "Is she safe?"

"There's nothing the matter with her that eight hours of sleep won't cure," the nurse said with a twinkle. "She sat up all night with you—wouldn't go home, or go to bed, until we swore you would be in better shape than she was if she didn't!"

He put up an experimental hand, felt the bandages swathing his skull. "What have I got?" he asked curiously. "A scrambled cerebrum?"

"You wouldn't be talking like this if you had," she answered. "And you really shouldn't be talking at all. But Dr. Campbell said I could tell you what was what if you'd promise to go to sleep again."

"I promise. Now, what is what?" "You had a mild concussion, but you're going to be fine if you'll be quiet for a few days. Dr. Campbell stitched up the cut in your scalp, and said anybody else would have had a fractured skull, but you must be a true New Hampshireman, you're so hard-headed."

"And Baron?"

"He's been arrested. They got the kerosene can, and it's been identified as one he had filled yesterday afternoon. . . . Now, that's enough." She got up and rustled from the room.

Andrew lay there, thinking. The house was safe now. Louis Baron wouldn't dare try anything further, since his son was caught red-handed. In fact, Andrew wouldn't be surprised if he could have his pick of the workmen now. Brandish men were not the kind who would willingly work for Baron after this.

But these matters were not nearly so important as what other thing the nurse had told him. Joan was all right. She wasn't hurt at all. And she had stayed with him at the hospital all night, refusing to go home. His eyes sought the side of the bed. She must have sat right there, waned and mused, and a little grimy, her proud head drooping with fatigue. And with this mental picture clear before him, Andrew fell asleep, a contented smile on his tired face.

ELECTION MAY SETTLE FEUD

Rights Issue Development Is Surprising To Many

WASHINGTON, July 21—Much to the surprise of a good many political prophets, the issue of civil rights emerges from both national nominating conventions as the campaign's number one domestic bone of contention.

Further, there is considerable puzzled fretting even among the seasoned and more cynical campaigners as to just where it will be wisest for them to take their stand—for it is an issue of many sides.

Certainly the Democratic convention proved, beyond any question or doubt, that it involves many more sectional viewpoints than merely the sharply divergent color stands of the Deep South and the industrial north.

Concerning that particular ancient feud, the convention did not prove—but perhaps the election will—whether the so-called Southern revolt within the Democratic Party actually was a spontaneous thing which sprang from the rank and file of voters or whether it was an artificial upsurge, manipulated from the top.

In any case, looking back over the national developments preceding the formation of the two party platforms, it is easy to see why the civil rights issue gained such powerful and nationwide prominence.

FIRST, it was an inevitable outgrowth of the war, for many reasons. Chief among those, of course, is the fact that men and women serving in even the most modern military organization during wartime must surrender many of the most prized of their civil rights. This also is true, to some extent, of civilians caught in the same crisis.

Thus, when the individual finally can shake both the uniform and the more chafing of the wartime controls, he tends to guard his newly-regained civil rights with a still-resentful jealousy.

This feeling has been obvious during the past two years on Capitol Hill, when one ordinary citizen after another rose up in wrath against the tactics and methods of certain congressional investigating committees.

Another war-born phase of the emphasis on civil rights developed from the wide travels, both at home and abroad, of young Americans during the 1941-46 period.

In one sense, it eased a good many ancient sectional feuds among the newer generation, since close contact between young Northerners and Southerners gave the lie to many a completely phoney legend still living after more than a hundred years. That sort of increased understanding unquestionably tended to throw more light and less heat on the civil rights question as a matter of legality rather than morality—thus pointing the way toward easing a hot-tempered deadlock of a century's standing. Finally, that same traveling taught many an American that every still-existing prejudice in this country was being distorted, magnified and repeatedly propagandized by those who would discredit us throughout the world.

DISCOVERY that their inability to honestly and categorically deny the least of such charges made them look ridiculous when they tried to deny the greatest of the lies ranked deeply within a good many patriotic young Americans.

Living as we do in a world goldfish bowl, a good many of them resolved that the best way to stop such deadly foreign propaganda was to eliminate the causes of even the half-truths on which it was founded—i. e., the remaining prejudicial laws and customs.

The postwar growth of Communism and subsequent domestic efforts to smother it have placed additional emphasis on the civil rights many-sided question. And so it has gone.

Coming up to the conventions, neither the Republicans nor the Democrats seemed to fully realize how widespread was the national intensity over the issue.

Both parties made the mistake of writing it off as a purely sectional problem which could be solved by paying two-faced lip service to both sides.

The Democrats even went so far as to consider it almost exclusively President Truman's political problem, which accounted for much of the effort to rid themselves of his candidacy.

But the convention's prompt and unprecedented reversal of a committee's majority report on the civil rights issue gave the party bosses a sudden and rude awakening. It also made the watching Republicans do a double-take on the issue.

Now it remains to be seen whether the campaign will develop emotion or intelligence in dealing with it.

Stassen Is Due In Dewey Camp

PAWLING, N. Y., July 21—Harold E. Stassen moved into the Dewey camp today and is scheduled to confer with the Republican presidential candidate on campaign plans.

Stassen, one of Thomas E. Dewey's bitterest rivals for the presidential nomination, is expected to help the Republican cause especially in the Midwest and among the younger voters.

DEATH PENALTY will be demanded for John Russell Gasser, 20, Seattle university student, who, Seattle, Wash., police say, signed a confession to the mutilation murder of Donna Woodcock, 22-year-old carhop. Her slap sent him into a fit of rage, he admitted. (International)

Brooding Miner Kills Inlaw

JACKSON, July 21—A Jackson County miner brooding over a divorce suit threatened against him shot and killed his sister-in-law, wounded his wife, and was in critical condition today with a self-inflicted bullet wound.

Sheriff Stanley Lewis said the dead woman, Amy Rhodes, 49, was felled by the bullets of Carl McCray in a family quarrel at Coalton, five miles north of here.

Lewis reported McCray first shot Miss Rhodes, chased his wife, Addie, 30, into the yard and pumped several shots into her body, and then returned to the house and fired a bullet through his own head.

APPEAL TO UN OR FORCE? Washington Holds Silent On Boiling Berlin Issue

WASHINGTON, July 21—Apprehensive officials in Washington are seeking to allay any fear of immediate war with the Soviet Union.

Despite the growing intensity of developments in Berlin, it is regarded as notable that thus far no public official in the American capital has seen fit to make any statement on the international situation.

The last official word was spoken by Secretary of State Marshall about three weeks ago. Marshall then declared that the United States forces would not be driven out of Berlin.

In private contacts with correspondents, officials are much more reticent than in the days preceding Pearl Harbor, an era since criticized severely because the American public—as well as leading officials—had not been kept well-informed.

DURING recent weeks when the Berlin situation moved to a climax, the American public has generally received its information from Berlin, London, Paris and Frankfurt.

Prior to the dispatch of the three-power protest to Moscow, officials in Washington took the position they could not talk about the situation because it was being dealt with in Berlin. Officials here, they said, only talk when it got to the governmental level.

The dispatch of the three

Hope Abandoned For Lone Miner

MCCURTAIN, Okla., July 21—Lone Star Steel Co. officials announced today that they have abandoned hope of saving a man trapped in a captive coal mine that caved in and killed another employee.

A spokesman for the McCurtain company stated that the miner, Lars Vinge, 34, was last seen in the area where the collapse occurred. Lars is believed to be buried under 60 tons of coal and debris.

The other miner, Millard Hartley, 27, died of suffocation yesterday, when a runaway coal car smashed into some supports, causing a caving, and touching off a fire and explosion. Nineteen miners climbed to safety through an air shaft following the blast and fire.

Milkman Found Hanged To Tree

COLUMBUS, July 21—An investigation was under way today in the hanging of Tennyson Malone, 46-year-old milkman, whose body was found suspended from a tree late yesterday.

The man's employer, the Schaff Dairy Farm, started a search for him when customers complained they hadn't received their milk. He was hanging by a rope made by ripping strips from a burlap bag and knotting them together. No motive could be given immediately for the death.

Five Points Man Granted Parole

Ernest Williams, 43, of near Five Points, who was sentenced Aug. 15, 1945, to the London prison farm on a statutory count, is one of 34 inmates granted paroles by the state pardon and parole commission.

Of all the cases considered by the board, three re-paroles also were granted and 14 other cases were continued. Those paroled will be released Aug. 26.

Quick Get-Away for Late Peas

By DEAN HALLIDAY

A QUICK, strong start is important for succession crops or an extra late planting of peas. Prompt germination is the first step toward a strong start. This allows the seedling plants quickly to get their roots down below the dry surface soil and find moisture if there be any within reach.

The second step is an adequate supply of plant food. Unless the soil is exceptionally rich, it will pay well to give each newly started late crop a side-dressing of a complete fertilizer.

Late varieties of peas can be planted even as the first cool days of early fall approach and still mature to give a crop before frost arrives. The yield, however, will not be as large as earlier planted peas.

In order to give late peas a running start, it will be well to

BELGRADE, July 21—Yugoslav Communists convened their Fifth Party Congress today under a pledge to proclaim their full support of Premier Marshal Tito.

Delegates of local organizations converged on Belgrade ready to back Tito in his dispute with the Soviet-controlled Communist Information Bureau which criticized the Yugoslav leadership.

The 2,000 delegates are expected to endorse without reservation the policies of Tito and other government leaders, which was denounced by the Cominform as anti-Soviet and against Marxist principles.

Bank Cashier To Get Hearing

COLUMBUS, July 20—A former Newark bank cashier, who admittedly embezzled $45,000, was held in Columbus today under $5,000 bond for jury action.

FBI agents arrested 40-year-old Clarence W. Idle in his Newark home yesterday and brought him to Columbus where he was arraigned on charges of making a false entry of $3,000.

Idle appeared before U. S. Commissioner Robert Newlon who decided, upon the cashier's admission of guilt, that there was "probable cause against him."

Although specifically charged with the false entry, A. E. Ostholtz, agent-in-charge of the FBI's Cincinnati office, said Idle admitted taking a total of $45,000 in the period between 1933 and July 1, 1948.

APPEAL TO UN OR FORCE?

Washington Holds Silent On Boiling Berlin Issue

WASHINGTON, July 21—Apprehensive officials in Washington are seeking to allay any fear of immediate war with the Soviet Union.

Despite the growing intensity of developments in Berlin, it is regarded as notable that thus far no public official in the American capital has seen fit to make any statement on the international situation.

The last official word was spoken by Secretary of State Marshall about three weeks ago. Marshall then declared that the United States forces would not be driven out of Berlin.

In private contacts with correspondents, officials are much more reticent than in the days preceding Pearl Harbor, an era since criticized severely because the American public—as well as leading officials—had not been kept well-informed.

DURING recent weeks when the Berlin situation moved to a climax, the American public has generally received its information from Berlin, London, Paris and Frankfurt.

Prior to the dispatch of the three-power protest to Moscow, officials in Washington took the position they could not talk about the situation because it was being dealt with in Berlin. Officials here, they said, only talk when it got to the governmental level.

Hope Abandoned For Lone Miner
McCURTAIN, Okla., July 21—Lone Star Steel Co. officials announced today that they have abandoned hope of saving a man trapped in a captive coal mine that caved in and killed another employee.

A spokesman for the McCurtain company stated that the miner, Lars Vinge, 34, was last seen in the area where the collapse occurred. Lars is believed to be buried under 60 tons of coal and debris.

The other miner, Millard Hartley, 27, died of suffocation yesterday, when a runaway coal car smashed into some supports, causing a cave-in, and touching off a fire and explosion. Nineteen miners climbed to safety through an air shaft following the blast and fire.

Milkman Found Hanged To Tree

COLUMBUS, July 21—An investigation was under way today in the hanging of Tennyson Malone, 46-year-old milkman, whose body was found suspended from a tree late yesterday. The man's employer, the Schaff Dairy Farm, started a search for him when customers complained they hadn't received their milk. He was hanging by a rope made by ripping strips from a burlap bag and knotting them together. No motive could be given immediately for the death.

notes to the Kremlin—later flatly rejected by Moscow—was supposed to have carried the matter to the governmental level. However, officials, while busily engaged in conferences, continued silent on the subject.

President Truman conferred Monday for 30 minutes with Marshall and later with Undersecretary of State Lovett, Defense Secretary Forrestal, Army Secretary Royall and Army Undersecretary Draper.

Marshall also called in John Foster Dulles, foreign affairs advisor to Gov. Thomas A. Dewey, GOP presidential nominee.

Both White House and State department officials conceded that the discussion involved Berlin. Draper had returned only over the weekend from Germany to discuss the problem.

Marshall later signed an agreement settling all claims between Marshal Tito, Moscow's first "bad boy" in the Eastern European satellite bloc.

AS A NET result, Tito receives $30 million in monetary aid to bolster his economy and the United States wipes off claims for two planes shot down by Tito's fighters and American claims for property nationalized in Yugoslavia's Communist government.

But, throughout the day, correspondents were unable to learn whether Brig. Gen. William L. Donovan, in Germany, spoke for himself or the government when he proposed economic sanctions in retaliation for the Russian Berlin blockade.

Privately, though, it was made clear that many efforts will be made to iron out the Berlin situation before sanctions are imposed, force is used to break the blockade or appeal is made to the United Nations.

TODAY'S GARDEN-GRAPH

Quick Get-Away for Late Peas

By DEAN HALLIDAY

A QUICK, strong start is important for succession crops or an extra late planting of peas.

Prompt germination is the first step toward a strong start. This allows the seedling plants quickly to get their roots down below the dry surface soil and find moisture if there be any within reach.

The second step is an adequate supply of plant food. Unless the soil is exceptionally rich, it will pay well to give each newly started late crop a side-dressing of a complete fertilizer.

Late varieties of peas can be planted even as the first cool days of early fall approach and still mature to give a crop before frost arrives. The yield, however, will not be as large as earlier planted peas.

In order to give late peas a running start, it will be well to soak the seeds overnight in lukewarm water, as illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph. This will speed germination.

Peas planted late in the season should be planted deeper than those planted early in the spring. Four to six inches, as illustrated, is suggested unless the soil in your garden is extremely heavy.

To insure getting the soil into close contact with the pea seeds walk over the row lightly after the seeds have been covered with soil. This procedure also helps to hasten germination. Do not completely fill the trench at first but continue to add more soil as the plants develop. This method encourages deep rooting.

Late peas should also have some sort of support since they are tall growing. Chicken wire is often used for this purpose.

Slav Commies Open Parley

BELGRADE, July 21—Yugoslav Communists convened their Fifth Party Congress today under a pledge to proclaim their full support of Premier Marshal Tito.

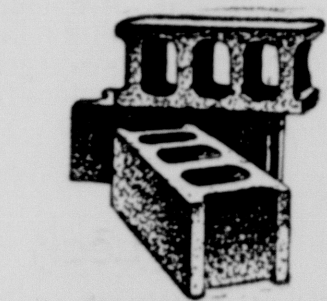

Delegates of local organizations converged on Belgrade ready to back Tito in his dispute with the Soviet-controlled Communist Information Bureau which criticized the Yugoslav leadership.

The 2,000 delegates are expected to endorse without reservation the policies of Tito and other government leaders, which was denounced by the Cominform as anti-Soviet and against Marxist principles.

Rains Seen Spoiling Presentation

3 Trophies Due City Softballers

Although it appeared at noon Wednesday the weatherman would not cooperate, Circleville Night Softball League officials were planning a big night at Ted Lewis Park.

Two principal attractions were on tap. First, there is a game between Isalys and Millions which will determine the league championship. Second was the presentation of three trophies for outstanding performances in league play.

A league championship trophy has been purchased for the Wednesday night tilt, and is to be presented in the event Isalys defeat Millions. However, the presentation will be postponed until after a playoff in the event Millions beat Isalys, which will put the Milliron in position of copping the second half crown.

A second trophy will be for "best team sportsmanship," while the third will go to the "most valuable player" in the league.

Thursday night's schedule contains a game between the Ted Lewis Park Playground Kids all-star team and the Columbus Right Angle Juniors at 7:15 p. m., followed by the Tink-Milliron game, postponed from last week.

FRIDAY NIGHT will be taken up by a donkey softball game for the benefit of Ted Lewis Park. Net profits from the exhibition game, between members of the American Legion and Booster Club are to be given into the Ted Lewis Park Improvement Fund. Gametime is set at 8 p. m.

Saturday night's schedule calls for the Columbus Collegians to meet the Circleville All-Stars at 7:15 p. m., followed by a game between Richards and 740 AC of Columbus.

James Callihan, night league head, said there are to be no tournaments played at the park this year, the rest of the season to be devoted to exhibition tilts.

Oilers Cop Kids League Crown

Boyd Errors Win For Boyers

Spur Oil softball team posted a 4-1 win over Weavers at Ted Lewis Park Tuesday night to gain the "championship" of the Circleville Kids League.

Boyers beat Boyds with a 3-0 shutout in the regular Circleville Night Softball League tilt following, the Boyer winning giving that team undisputed third place in league standings.

Third place had been at a tie between Boyers and Tinks before the Tuesday tilt.

Ted Mogan gave the winning mound performance in the Oiler-Weaver encounter, registering five strikeouts in the five-inning game while giving but two walks and allowing but four hits. Harold Weaver, charged with the loss, registered two strikeouts in the fracas, but gave up five free trips and allowed eight hits.

THE WINNING Oilers team was given a new softball as "championship" prize, while the losing Weavers team was awarded a slightly used agate for its efforts.

The Boyd-Boyer encounter following the kids game proved to be a pitchers' duel between Harold Hill of Boyds and Stillman Morrison of Boyers.

Pitchers' records for the tilt were about evenly matched for the fracas. Hill striking out two while Morrison fanned six, Morrison allowing two walks while Hill allowed none, and Hill giving up five hits while Morrison gave three.

The game continued a mound battle through the first four innings of play, neither side able to send a man home.

The fifth inning of the game proved the decider for the tilt, when numerous Boyd errors and Boyer hit gave the Boyer aggregation three unearned runs in the frame.

The rest of the game was a resumption of the mound duel.

Cleveland Sets 15-Game Series In Tell-Tale Race

NEW YORK, July 21—The league-leading Cleveland Indians begin today the first of 15 consecutive games with the chief contenders for the American League pennant.

This stint may determine the Tribe's chances to cop the flag this year.

Cleveland opens a four-game series against the Champion New York Yankees with a doubleheader today. This is followed by a three and four game meet with the Boston Red Sox, the Philadelphia Athletics, and the Red Sox again.

The Boston club is the only game in first division that has been winning consistently. They have moved up steadily and have narrowed the gap of fourth place to a mere 4 1/2 games.

If the Indians can hold on to first place through this series the chances are good for them to coast into their first pennant since 1920.

Cleveland failed to take advantage of ten hits last night and lost to the Washington Senators, 2 to 1. The Indians had the tying and winning runs on base in the ninth with only one out, but Reliever Sid Hudson put out the fire to secure the victory for Rae Scarborough.

THE RED SOX gained ground on first division clubs. Jack Kramer, the right-hander from the St. Louis Browns last winter, beat his former teammates 8 to 3 to ring up his ninth straight win. He has won 11 and lost but three.

Among the seven hits Kramer distributed were homers by Les Moss and Don Lund. Lefty Bill Kennedy and Reliever Al Widmar were the victims of Boston's 13-hit attack.

The Yankees lost to Detroit 2 to 1 with Virgil Trucks setting them down with six hits to score his eighth triumph. Hoot Evers singled home George Kell in the ninth to pin Allie Reynolds with the loss.

Pat Mullin, Tiger outfielder, hit his 13th homerun in the seventh.

Mario Pieretti, Chicago White Sox right-hander, checked the Philadelphia Athletics with a half-dozen hits and prevented the Mackmen from gaining first place. The score was 5 to 2.

In the National League, the Dodgers continued in hot pursuit of the Boston Braves with a 5 to 0 shutout of the Chicago Cubs. Rex Barney won his sixth game, chalked up his first major league shutout, and pitched his fourth successive complete game.

Rookie Bob Rush took the loss for the Chicagoans.

Pittsburgh stayed abreast of Brooklyn in second place with an 11 to 2 shelling of the Philadelphia Phillies. Rookie Bon Chesnes coasted to his fifth win as his mates made the most of their seven hits off four Philly hurlers.

ROOKIE Lefthander Curt Simmons was charged with the loss.

The Phillies went to the bottom of the barrel and let a former catcher, Al Lakeman, take to the mound. Pirate Catcher Ed Fitzgerald smacked Lakeman's first pitch for a three-run blast, his first big league homer.

Eddie Miller hit a homerun in the seventh inning.

The league-leading Boston Braves were "outhomered" 3 to 2 with the result that the Cincinnati Reds went on to win 9 to 6. Jeff Heath and Tommy Holmes walloped circuit clouts for the Braves.

Johnny Wyrostek, Danny Litwhiler, and Ted Kluszewski hit homers for Cincinnati to give starter Bill Voiselle the loss. Litwhiler, traded this year from the Braves, got four hits in four tries to help Herman Wehmeier to his sixth win.

The supreme court admitted the commission's appeal to review today.

However, since the supreme court is no longer hearing cases until its fall term, Beulah Park's hopes of securing a fall racing date may be jeopardized.

Feature Trot Is Divided

CHICAGO, July 21—Buzz Hanover and Rose Spencer topped the field in the $1,500 Divided 15 Class Trot, the feature of Maywood Park's harness racing program last night.

Buzz Hanover won the first half of the trot, a mile event, and paid $56.20, $19.80 and $7.80. Rose Spencer was second with Wake Abbey third.

Rose Spencer captured the second half at a mile and one-sixteenth by beating McKenzie King and Jerry A. Hanover and returned $6.60 $3.80 and $3.60.

Boyd's Schedule Game At Pen

Boyd's softball team of Circleville Night Softball League is to play a Chillicothe Federal Reformatory team Thursday night. The game will mark the opening of a new athletic field there. The players are to be guests at the reformatory for dinner at 4:30 p. m., their game with the prison team to be played at 6 p. m.

Peru Team Set

NEW YORK, July 21—Peru's 30-man Olympic team is scheduled to leave New York by plane today for London and the Olympic games. The South American squad will participate in five events—basketball, fencing, weight-lifting, rifle, and javelin throwing.

Furillo Hurt

CHICAGO, July 21—Outfielder Carl Furillo of the Brooklyn Dodgers was sidelined today with a broken nose suffered in pre-game practice. Furillo was hit by a line drive off the bat of Coach Ray Blades at Wrigley Field.

SOMETHING NEW has been added to the equipment needed by a baseball umpire. It's a new type plastic body protector that is 75 per cent lighter in weight and costs 50 per cent less. Brewers Grab AA Leadership From Indians

By International News Service

A new leader occupied the American Association driver's seat today, giving the baseball experts their first chance in many weeks to say "I told you so."

The Milwaukee Brewers, preseason favorites to win the Association championship, finally overhauled the long-time leader, Indianapolis, last night.

The Brewers took their second in a row from the Indians, and did it by a convincing 13-to-3 margin. That boosted Milwaukee a half game ahead of Indianapolis in the standings.

The Tribe's early season belweather, Jim Bagby, proved wholly inadequate to the task of stopping the Milwaukee threat. He departed in the fourth inning when the Brewers scored nine times.

All together, Milwaukee had 17 hits off five Indianapolis hurlers. Meanwhile, Ed Wright gave up 11 hits but kept the game in the palm of his hand.

Marv Rickert, Damon Phillips and Skipper Roberge all hit homers for the Brewers.

In the only other game played, Columbus slaughtered St. Paul, 12 to 1. The Red Birds had 18 hits, including a homer by Joe Garagiola. Kurt Krieger held the Apostles to five safeties.

Louis Denies Fights Planned

DETROIT, July 21—Joe Louis denied vigorously today that he will make another defense of his heavyweight crown, and said he was "definitely through" fighting.

The Brown Bomber added: "I've retired and that's all there is to it. I won't fight again."

Nat Fleischer, editor of Ring Magazine, yesterday quoted Louis in a copyrighted story as saying he was tired of just playing golf and might fight Gus Lesnevich.

Louis today denied the story, and said he hadn't seen Fleischer since the Walcott fight.

Hawaiians Set Publinks Pace

ATLANTA, July 21—A couple of Hawaiians gave their United States competitors a golfing lesson as the National Public Links golf tournament here moved into the third round today.

The Hawaiians—Sadaji Kinoshita and Charles Makaiwa of Honolulu—each knocked out 8 and 7 victories in second round matches yesterday.

Kinoshita overcame Oliver Hollingsworth of Indianapolis, while Makaiwa was taking the measure of Leonard Ruck of Toledo.

Quarter finals will be held tomorrow and the 36 hole semi-finals and finals will be staged Friday and Saturday.

U.S. Olympic Teams Arrive In England

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng., July 21—United States candidates for Olympiad paeans debarked from the Liner America here today in bright English sunshine after a perfect crossing of the Atlantic. The 221 members of Uncle Sam's Olympic team came ashore after daybreak following a midnight arrival in port.

Canoists and other boat teams set off immediately for Henley, site of the famed royal regatta, while the basketball team entrained for Scotland where it is scheduled to play four games in the next few days.

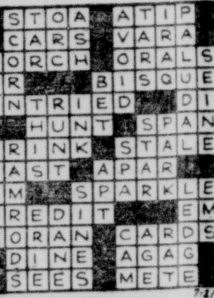

The remainder of athletic talent headed for Olympic headquarters at Uxbridge and Wembley. These fortunate will have two days to see the sights of London before getting down to the business of final training for the strenuous games.

The incidentless crossing was concluded with a marked spirit of gaiety and confidence.

Casualties among the 17-sport squad were minor. In fact, the only mishap was sustained by California's eight-oared shell. A rush job on the damaged craft has been completed but Coach Ky Ebright still fears the shell will not be ship-shape.

Beulah Park Tiff To Get Court Airing

COLUMBUS, July 21—The question of whether the State Racing Commission must act on Beulah Park's request for racing dates was admitted to review by the state supreme court today.

The Grove City racing oval is fighting the commission's regulation requiring the installation of totalizer betting machines at all tracks of three-quarters of a mile or more in length.

The Beulah Park Jockey Club first filed for dates in February, nearly a month before the commission made its "tote" rule. A week later the jockey club appealed from the rule to the Franklin County common pleas court.

In retaliation, the commission refused to act on the request for racing dates until the court appeal was decided—or withdrawn.

THE JOCKEY club then asked the same court for a writ of mandamus ordering the commission to act on the application. The common pleas court denied the writ, but was reversed by the second district appellate court. The latter ordered the commission to act on the application and held that enforcement of the "tote" rule was finally decided by the courts.

The supreme court admitted the commission's appeal to review today.

However, since the supreme court is no longer hearing cases until its Fall term, Beulah Park's hopes of securing a Fall racing date may be jeopardized.

New Price Supports Seen Having Little Effect Here

Recent modifications made by Washington legislators on price supports will have little effect on Pickaway County grown corn and wheat.

For the most part, changes in the so-called "wartime" programs which expire at the end of 1948 will have little bearing on crops grown in this county.

John Boggs, county Agriculture Adjustment Administration chairman, said Wednesday the 1949 supports will be similar to those now in effect.

He outlined the major provisions of the 1949 government program thusly:

Ninety percent of parity will be supported on basic crops of corn, wheat, rice, tobacco and peanuts grown in 1949 and marketed before June 30, 1950.

BOGGS declared this to be the same level that the crops have been supported recently. However, the support on cotton, although it does not affect local farmers, will be reduced to 90 percent of parity from the present level of 9½ percent.

Pickaway County farmers will receive an extension of 90 percent of parity on hogs, chickens, eggs, milk and milk products marketed before Jan. 1, 1950. Potatoes harvested before Jan. 1, 1949, are also scheduled for the same parity level, Boggs stated.

Meanwhile, lending and purchase operations for price support for other agricultural commodities during 1949 are to be carried out to the extent of available funds.

However, Boggs said, the secretary of agriculture may require compliance with production goals and marketing regulations as a condition of price support.

The new "long-range" farm price support provisions become effective beginning Jan. 1, 1950, the AAA chairman disclosed. These generally provide for a level of support somewhat lower than the war years, but higher than authorized earlier.

Wool is to be supported at 60 to 90 percent of parity, or at whatever level the secretary of agriculture determines is necessary to encourage the annual production of 360 million pounds of shorn wool.

New regulations stipulate definitely, "except when necessary to increase or maintain production in the interest of national security, no support under the long-range program can be higher than 90 percent of parity or a comparable price."

The old Latin word for money—"pecunia," from which we get our word "pecuniary"—came from "pecus," meaning cattle.

Navy Denies A-Bomb Tale

WASHINGTON, July 21 — Reports that a U. S. naval vessel with an atomic bomb aboard was lost in 1945 were officially denied today by the Navy.

The Navy said that such reports apparently were based on the loss of 800 lives and the Cruiser Indianapolis by torpedo action in 1945.

The Navy said the Indianapolis, just prior to the sinking had unloaded at Tinian island and the two atom bombs later dropped on Japan. There was no bomb aboard, the Navy emphasized.

Meanwhile, lending and purchase operations for price support for other agricultural commodities during 1949 are to be carried out to the extent of available funds.

However, Boggs said, the secretary of agriculture may require compliance with production goals and marketing regulations as a condition of price support.

The new "long-range" farm price support provisions become effective beginning Jan. 1, 1950, the AAA chairman disclosed. These generally provide for a level of support somewhat lower than the war years, but higher than authorized earlier.

Wool is to be supported at 60 to 90 percent of parity, or at whatever level the secretary of agriculture determines is necessary to encourage the annual production of 360 million pounds of shorn wool.

New regulations stipulate definitely, "except when necessary to increase or maintain production in the interest of national security, no support under the long-range program can be higher than 90 percent of parity or a comparable price."

The old Latin word for money—"pecunia," from which we get our word "pecuniary"—came from "pecus," meaning cattle.

Navy Denies A-Bomb Tale

WASHINGTON, July 21 — Reports that a U. S. naval vessel with an atomic bomb aboard was lost in 1945 were officially denied today by the Navy.

The Navy said that such reports apparently were based on the loss of 800 lives and the Cruiser Indianapolis by torpedo action in 1945.

The Navy said the Indianapolis, just prior to the sinking had unloaded at Tinian island and the two atom bombs later dropped on Japan. There was no bomb aboard, the Navy emphasized, when the ship was sunk enroute to Guam.

Rear Admiral Ellis M. Zacharias, retired, had related the report in a broadcast Sunday night and promised to describe the loss fully on his program next Sunday night.
